Troublemaker is about 6 feet tall, and athletically built. He carries himself with a little bit of a military attitude, which clashes with his shaggy hair and casual dress. He prefers to wear t-shirts, leather jackets and combat boots.

Word on the Street:

>> Troublemaker's right.... The guys been in town for like a week, I think, and he's already been in at least two bar fights that I know of.

>> D-C

>> Did he win?

>> Beaky

>> Well, I didn't see them hauling away a bloody carcass afterwards, so I assume he at least held his own!

>> D-C

>> Hah! Funny... He looks just like this dead UCAS Marine that my search agent just happened to find when I did a facial recognition search

>> Stumpy

Personal Commentary:

Fuck yeah I can handle it, asswipe. I'm qualified on 18 different rifles and spent a year doing heavy weapons support. AK-97, Rocket Propelled Grenade, toss a fireball or two... Whatever I need to get the job done.

Roleplaying Notes:

Troublemaker has a history of insubordination, not because of outright disobedience, but more because she has a slight problem with 'authority'... especially unwarranted authority. He places a high value on respect in ones abilities, not in one's position of the totem pole. If you display the capability to make sound decisions and follow through with them, he'll follow you to the ends of the earth; but if your one of those folks who just drops a few names and expects others to do your dirty work, expect trouble.
