Little Hawk is obviously Native American born. His tendency towards tribal tattoos and turquoise jewelry only compounds that fact. He tends to dress in jeans and tee shirts with western boots. When in areas where they are not discouraged, he usually wears his pistols in twin hip holders.

Word on the Street:

>> Little Hawk's a damn good rooftop man. If you need someone in a crow's nest watching your back, you could do a lot worse than him.

>> H.K.

>> Guy was a pretty decent bodyguard out NAN way a few years back, too. Granted, you don't really need to clean up that much for work out there.

>> Stumpy

>> The guys a friggin' Indian. I'm talking a warpaint wearing, horse stealing, 'Woo-Woo' Indian. From what I gather he was raised in a 'back to nature' survivalist compound within the Native American Nation's borders

>> Beaky

>> And you have a problem with 'Woo-woo' Indians?

>> White Eagle

Personal Commentary:

Shoot for accuracy.

Don't be showy.

Why waste ammo?

Roleplaying Notes:

In a firefight, White-Eagle conserves ammo. He uses a single shot where others would use a burst, and a burst where others would go full auto. He perceives himself as being a member of the team, no more, no less. He covers the others' backs and expects the same in return. He does his job, and expects the others to do theirs as well as or better than he does his. He's somewhat quiet, so when he says something it's worth listening to.
